Public Sale —OF— Mason Co. Farm

As Executor of Phoebe Marshall, deceased, I will, on Saturday, September 2

1916, at 2 p. m., on the premises, sell at public auction the farm owned by her on which she resided at her death, containing about 176 acres, lying just north of the town of Washington and within 200 yards of the Maysville and Lexington turnpike road, which runs through said town, and within half a mile of the new Washington High School building. Said farm is located in the best part of Mason county, and is in a fine state of cultivation. It is well watered, has on it a one and one-half story brick dwelling house, containing six rooms and kitchen, one tenant house, stable, carriage house, silo and two large tobacco barns, one of which is also a stock barn. It adjoins the lands of George Longnecker, Larkin brothers, A. L. Glasscock, Clarence Tucker, Mrs. Mattie McCarr and Mrs. Pearl Marshall. Full possession of the farm will be given to purchaser on March 1, 1917, but possession of the dwelling house with privilege of seeding during the coming fall, will be given at once on completion of the sale.

The farm will be sold on a credit of six and twelve months, the purchaser to execute bonds with good personal security, bearing six per cent. interest from the day of sale, each for one-half the purchase money, with privilege, however, of paying the whole purchase price in cash at any time before same falls due, with interest up to the date of payment.

This sale is made pursuant to the directions contained in the will of Phoebe Marshall, deceased.

E. L. WORTHINGTON,
Executor of Phoebe Marshall, deceased.

"SECOND SAND" IN ESTILL OIL FIELD?

J. H. McClurkin, Manager of the Furnace Company, Talks of General Situation in Irvine Section.

SAYS SMALL REFINERY AND GOOD ROADS NEEDED

J. H. McClurkin, manager of the Furnace Oil Company, a new corporation recently formed in Estill county, in which a number of Lexington people are interested, came to Lexington Saturday for a few days rest.

"Lexington is a haven of rest," said Mr. McClurkin, "to hundreds of people who are putting up with unendurable inconveniences and discomforts in their work of development of the Irvine field.

"The activity in Estill county has brought far more people into Irvine than can be taken care of, and while there are many improvements being made, living and working conditions are far from comfortable.

"The greatest difficulty in the development of the Irvine field is the abominable condition of the roads. After every rain the main highways are wallows of the stickiest kind of mud, with pits and chuckholes in which a horse often sinks belly-deep.

"The county authorities appear to be taking no adequate steps to relieve the situation, and the oil operators have spent thousands of dollars by private subscription to make the roads to their properties passable.

"The greatest interest just now in Irvine is over the reported location of a second sand, which if it is authenticated, will remove the last shadow of doubt as to the permanence of the Irvine field.

"Thus far there has been but one well drilled down into what is believed to be the second sand. It was sunk by the McKnight syndicate on what is known as the Scribner farm, and is known as the Scribner well. The operators have not yet made what statement as to the conditions under which the second sand was reached, and rumors have the depth of the well at from six hundred to one thousand feet. The general belief is that the well is down about eight hundred feet.

"A significant fact in connection with this operation is that the owners of the lease have been very active in purchasing other nearby leases and royalties, and well drillers on the property have also made purchases on their own account.

"The confidence with which the McKnight operators are spending their own money for additional holdings is regarded as strong evidence that the so-called second-sand well has exceptionally promising indications.

"There is no question but that the Irvine fields is in need of a convenient independent refinery. It would not necessarily have to be a large one at first, and a small plant at Irvine, with an initial capacity of five hundred barrels, would greatly improve conditions by providing an independent market, and lay the foundations for more extensive refining operations if the development of the field continues to meet the expected production.

"It would seem to be the part of business prudence to establish such a plant at Irvine, as a complete refinery could be set up with no more expense than a pipe line to some other point would cost. The present output is such that a small refinery can be established without danger of loss thru a failure in the supply, and the very fact of its establishment and operation would have a very salutary effect upon the price of crude oil to the producers.
